Boston

Biography

Michael Collora handles complex civil and criminal litigation in federal and state courts, as well as regulatory work dealing with federal and state regulatory agencies. He is a founding partner of Collora LLP, now the Boston office of Hogan Lovells.

Michael has represented a wide array of clients from many industries during his career, including mutual funds, investment banks, and private equity funds. In recent years, he has frequently represented companies, executives, managers, shareholders, brokers, traders, and professionals in the financial services sector.

Michael has frequently represented both plaintiffs and defendants in securities cases, including investigations by the SEC and state security offices. He has years of experience in matters involving allegations of stock fraud, irregular accounting practices, and insider trading. In addition, he has tried more than 60 federal cases to a judge or jury.

Clients also hire Michael to assess the merits, likely outcomes, and projected costs of litigation in all kinds of commercial cases, including cases involving arcane matters, such as disputes over the value of shipping vessels.

Before founding Collora LLP, Michael served as an Assistant U.S. Attorney for eight years and headed the
