

Franziska Reich

Associate

Berlin

Biography

Franziska Reich spots and understands the challenges of our complex and global world. With this international angle she advises clients on solving their global disputes in and out of court. Franziska always keeps the economic side of arising issues in view.

As part of our litigation team Franziska supports national and international companies in disputes in front of national courts. This includes proceedings for interim measures and injunctions as well as enforcement proceedings. Her strength is dealing with questions of international law, such as identifying the appropriate forum, challenging jurisdiction and identifying the applicable law.

Her current focus is on supply chain disputes in the automotive sector. Franziska is currently finishing her PhD thesis in the area of international civil procedure law.

Her keen understanding of international issues started from a young age: Franziska was raised bilingually and later, she also spent considerable time abroad during her studies. Before joining Hogan Lovells and while working on her PhD thesis, Franziska worked for another international law firm in the field private equity transactions.
