

Joseph L. Lambert

Senior Associate
Colorado Springs

Biography

Joe Lambert knows construction and engineering from the ground up. A seasoned litigator with over a dozen trials under his belt, Joe has successfully represented a range of diverse clients involved in the construction and design industries – including owners, architects, engineers, general contractors, subcontractors, and suppliers.

He advises clients on a wide variety of complex, high-dollar construction and design-related disputes in both state and federal trial courts and arbitration forums across the Western United States.

Joe successfully represents clients in the full gamut of construction and design-related disputes, including construction/design defect, delay, acceleration, and disruption claims, and on projects ranging from single family homes to more complex projects. From dams and mixed-use mountain resorts to gold ore processing plants, Joe's deep litigation experience and background in construction and design also has given him keen insight on how clients can help avoid disputes when negotiating contract terms. In addition to his litigation experience, Joe also has significant experience representing clients in connection with contract preparation and negotiation.
