Biography

Lisa Dong leverages her experience to defend innovation with comprehensive, detail-driven solutions for her clients. Lisa's technical background provides a road map to successfully navigate complex industry nuances.

Lisa's practice focuses on intellectual property litigations, including patent and trade secret disputes, and counseling involving a wide range of product areas, including medical devices, network security, vehicle telematics, consumer electronics, telecommunications, semiconductors, and mobile phones. Lisa represents clients before federal district courts, the U.S. International Trade Commission (USITC), and the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office (USPTO). She successfully represented a client at trial before the USITC and assisted another client with obtaining a general exclusion order.

Prior to joining Hogan Lovells, Lisa was the staff attorney and pro se law clerk with the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Indiana. Before her clerkship, she spent six and a half years with the IP litigation groups at large law firms in Washington, D.C.
