

Corporate Responsibility and Supply Chain Security

Running your global organization with discipline and transparency is smart business. So it is critical to comply with corporate responsibility and supply chain security rules.

We help clients understand and comply appropriately. And ensure global operations adhere to rules regarding child and prison labor, and in dealing with labor unions.

For companies concerned about how the new administration's trade policies could affect their cross-border supply chains (e.g., parts, components, or raw materials that enter the U.S. duty-free under NAFTA, or are imported from China), we offer sophisticated advice on how to handle complex trade and customs issues.

Our seasoned team includes former government lawyers who negotiated or worked with aspects of these laws from the inside. Being on the forefront of this area means we can anticipate new trends and rules.

Transparent practices are best for business and for our global community. We help keep your operations running smoothly and safely.

Representative experience

Help create coalition of trade associations regarding forced labor law enforcement.

Advised U.S. company on compliance with International Labor Organization and United Nation conventions.

Contacts

Chandri Navarro,
Washington, D.C.

Jonathan T. Stoel,
Washington, D.C.

Jared R. Wessel,
Washington, D.C.

Warren H. Maruyama,
Washington, D.C.

Practices

International Trade and Investment

Latest thinking and events

Webinar

Antitrust and tech: Key issues explained and explored

Brochures

Hogan Lovells automotive and mobility thought leadership paper

Hogan Lovells Publications

China, supply chain risk, and the race to 5G

International Trade Alert

Hogan Lovells Publications

Trade Demystified Video Series