

Governance

Higher education institutions comply with ever-changing regulatory requirements and adapt to evolving norms of governance. At Hogan Lovells, we have extensive experience in advising universities, colleges, academic medical centers, research organizations, and other education groups on all aspects of institutional governance.

Representative experience

Advising university boards on their structure, policies, and risk-management practices.

Advising on application of institutional investigation policies in cases of alleged research misconduct.

Advising on institutional policy and practice related to faculty, staff, and student governance.

Preparing white papers for national higher education associations on conflict of interest policy and practice.

Contacts

Michael J. Vernick,
Washington, D.C.

Stephanie J. Gold,
Washington, D.C.

Elizabeth B. Meers,
Washington, D.C.

Martin Michaelson,
Washington, D.C.

Practices

Education

Industries

Education