Biography

Mark Gibson strives to provide clients with first-rate advocacy – compelling, powerful, persuasive ideas expressed clearly, concisely, and elegantly. The goal is to marry top-notch arguments with what David Foster Wallace called "incredibly clear, beautiful, alive, urgent, crackling-with-voltage prose."

That's the kind of advocacy Mark has brought to bear on litigation involving contracts, federal investigations, renewable-energy projects, health care insurance, land purchases, and civil rights. Mark has penned multiple winning briefs in both trial and appellate courts. And the most important readers of those briefs – the judges – have praised them as "nicely phrased" and "excellent." Mark has also presented oral argument in the Ninth and Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Mark forged this passion for rigorous legal thinking and crystal-clear legal writing while clerking, first for Judge Alan Johnson on the United States District Court for the District of Wyoming, then for Judge Gregory Phillips on the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit.

Mark's commitment to excellence in the law started early. He graduated near the top of his class from the University of Colorado School of Law. In the process, he won several awards for legal writing and leadership and served as the editor in chief of the University of
