

Ryan Woo

Associate

Washington, D.C.

Biography

Ryan Woo helps clients navigate the diverse range of privacy and cybersecurity challenges that confront companies in today's global data-driven economy.

Whether it involves advising on the privacy implications of new products and services, responding to a data breach, or implementing a global compliance program for a new data protection law, Ryan helps companies understand the rapidly evolving legal landscape and identify and implement business-oriented solutions.

As a member of Hogan Lovells' leading Privacy and Cybersecurity practice, Ryan works with clients that range from startups to global enterprises and span a broad range of industries, including aerospace and defense, automotive, health care, information technology, media, and retail. Ryan regularly counsels clients on incident response, regulatory investigations, and compliance with U.S. and international data protection laws, regulations, and standards.

While in law school, Ryan served as a mentor and writing tutor for first-year law students as a member of the Harvard Law School Board of Student Advisers. He received a B.A. in government, summa cum laude, from Cornell University.

Phone

+1 202 637 4993

Fax

+1 202 637 5910

Email

ryan.woo@hoganlovells.com

Practices

Privacy and Cybersecurity

Consumer Law

Marketing and Advertising

Industries

Automotive and Mobility

Consumer

TMT

Areas of focus

California Consumer Privacy Act

Latest thinking and events

- Blog Post
 - California Consumer Privacy Act: The Challenge Ahead – A Comparison of 10 Key Aspects of The GDPR and The CCPA

Education and admissions

Education

J.D., Harvard Law School, cum laude, 2016

B.A., Cornell University, summa cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa, 2011

Bar admissions and qualifications

District of Columbia

California
