

Exchanging information in the health care sector: A guide to managing antitrust

01 February 2018

AHLA Journal of Health & Life Sciences Law, Volume 11, No 2

What is the issue? Information exchanges within the health care sector will increase as providers and payers seek to provide more integrated care and enter into alternative payment models that depend on greater information sharing regarding costs and quality. Such information exchanges may have the potential to raise significant antitrust concerns.

Read more: Exchanging information in the Health Care Sector: A Guide to Managing Antitrust

Contacts

Robert F.
Leibenluft

Senior Counsel

> Read the full article online