

Removing the court's power to decide for the minister of mineral resources

30 July 2018

Public officials' decisions aren't always flawless when applying the Mineral and Petroleum Resources Development Act, No 28 of 2002 (MPRDA), and there are often situations where the Minister of Mineral Resources makes an incorrect decision. In these circumstances a person is not without any legal remedies. It is possible to bring a court application to set aside the incorrect decision, and refer the matter back to the minister for reconsideration.

Click here to read the full article.

Contacts

Clinton
Pavlovic

Senior
Associate

> Read the full article online