Biography

Javier Camacho has been focused on environmental matters since his days as a law clerk. With the rising tide of environmental concerns and regulations, his focused approach and wide understanding of how different industries interact with the environment are an invaluable asset to clients' needs.

With a knack for staying ahead of the rapidly developing environmental regulations, Javier is always ready to identify key areas of concern before they become a problem, helping clients save resources with timely attention to incoming challenges.

Javier is particularly familiar with the hydrocarbons, automotive, consumer products, and technology industries, whether addressing specific concerns, identifying areas of opportunity, or tracing new paths where the authorities are yet to effectively regulate.

Javier works hard to build relationships with both clients and environmental authorities in order to ensure clear and open channels of communications are available to address delicate matters.
