

Jessica B. Bigby

Associate

Washington, D.C.

Biography

Jessica Bigby focuses her practice on civil, criminal, and administrative investigations involving the federal government. She has a wide variety of clients, including large corporations and higher education institutions.

She helps clients navigate complex government and internal investigations, from allegations under the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act to potential violations of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990.

Prior to joining the firm, Jessica spent over a decade at the Department of Defense. Her background in policy, government contracting, and human resources gives her a unique perspective on complex issues related to compliance.

While in law school, Jessica served as an editor for the Georgetown Journal of Legal Ethics and gained valuable experience in Georgetown's Civil Litigation Clinic, where she assisted with the representation of 17 members of Congress.

Jessica is also dedicated to the firm's pro bono efforts. She represents clients in criminal justice matters and has successfully obtained civil protection orders for victims of domestic violence.
