

Margaux J. Hall

Counsel

Washington, D.C.

Biography

Margaux Hall's practice is at the forefront of health reform in federal health care programs. Margaux has in-depth knowledge about prescription drug pricing, including contracting arrangements; drug price reporting obligations under Medicaid, Medicare, and the Public Health Service programs; and the manner in which vertical integrations are affecting the pharmaceutical supply chain. She also advises clients on legal and policy issues relating to delivery system reforms, including emerging value-based payment approaches for drugs and other products in Medicare and Medicaid. Additionally, Margaux focuses on the requirements that pertain to Medicare Advantage plans and Medicaid managed care organizations.

Margaux counsels clients on the nuts and bolts of health care regulations as they exist today. She also has her finger firmly on the pulse of where and how the federal and state policy landscape is shifting. Margaux's experience and knowledge allow her to advise clients on practical solutions to problems in the changing health care landscape.

Early in her legal career, Margaux received a Fulbright Fellowship to research health care law and health system reform in South Africa and then helped lead similar research programs with the World Bank's Legal Vice Presidency. Before attending Harvard Law School,
