Partner

Washington, D.C.

Biography

Siobhan Rausch focuses on the increasingly complex area of tax-exempt organizations. She advises charitable, educational, health and scientific research organizations; private foundations; and trade associations.

The emergence of social enterprises, proliferation of impact investing, and commercialization of research and other program activities has blurred the once sharp line between charitable and for-profit activity. Siobhan uses her technical know-how and practical judgment to help nonprofit and for-profit enterprises best navigate those lines.

Siobhan obtains IRS private letter rulings for clients and handles their complex tax-exemption applications. Organizations seek her assistance on the qualification and retention of their tax exemptions, audits, restructurings, mergers and strategic transactions, joint ventures, collaborations, investments (including program-related investments), and governance and unrelated business income tax (UBIT). Siobhan has particular experience (and has advised congressional tax-writing committee staff) on IRS supporting organization rules. She also represents a number of U.S. "friends of" organizations and international nonprofits in global microfinance and other activities. She has helped large corporate foundations structure patient
