

Katie Hughes

Associate

Washington, D.C.

Biography

Katie Hughes works with life sciences and health care companies to navigate the complex regulatory landscape required in order to achieve their business and strategic goals.

Katie advises pharmaceutical and biotechnology companies on a broad range of regulatory matters. She has experience developing strategies for drug regulatory approval and marketing exclusivity, assisting with advertising and promotional matters, and counseling on regulatory aspects of life sciences mergers and acquisitions.

Katie also has experience counseling health care and life sciences companies on antitrust issues related to strategic transactions and government investigations. She has helped clients assess the potential antitrust risk associated with transactions and comply with reporting requirements and second requests. She has also drafted presentations and white papers to advocate before antitrust enforcers on the competitive landscape, economic and financial analyses, and policy issues. Katie has worked on matters before the Federal Trade Commission, U.S. Department of Justice, and state attorneys general.

While at Harvard Law School, Katie was on the Executive Board of the Harvard Negotiation Law
