

Adeela Khan

Associate

London

Biography

As part of the firm's market-leading product liability practice, Adeela Khan advises clients on commercial litigation and regulatory issues.

She has experience in acting for life science clients in both litigation and arbitration involving allegations of regulatory and contractual breaches. She also advises major manufacturers on EU and UK product regulations. This involves helping clients ensure their products comply with relevant safety legislation, assisting them in their conversations with regulators, and managing potential product safety risks.

Adeela maintains a varied pro bono practice and has assisted with applications for criminal injuries compensation, and advised on the establishment and operations of a charitable incorporated organisation.

As a trainee, Adeela spent six months in our Paris office, where she gained experience in international arbitration. Prior to moving to the UK, she lived in Pakistan where she gained work experience at a corporate law firm.
