Biography

Margaux Renard is an Associate in our Paris litigation team and actively involved in the firm's Business and Human Rights Group.

With particular experience on cross-border and mass tort litigation, she focuses her practice on product liability and commercial disputes arising in the life sciences industry. Regularly assisting clients facing pre-litigation claims, she has developed an in-depth knowledge of amicable dispute resolution.

With a degree in Private Law, Margaux has strong skills on litigation techniques and procedural strategies. Her master's degree in business law from the University of Paris Dauphine has provided her with a solid understanding of business needs as well as a good level in economics and management. Her academic background allows her to grasp legal matters from several angles, a real asset in managing the ins and outs of a dispute.

While at the Paris Bar School, Margaux joined the firm's Paris-London internship program. This enabled her to complete a first internship in the Financial Services Disputes department in London and a second one in the Litigation department in Paris, at the end of which she joined the team.
