Biography

Sara Silva handles white collar criminal and complex civil litigation in state and federal courts, administrative hearings, and government investigations and enforcement actions.

Sara's clients include global companies, executives, and licensed professionals in various industries, including hemodialysis and peritoneal dialysis services and products; pharmaceutical and medical device manufacturing; public office; commercial fishing; and real estate development. On the government enforcement/investigations side, she defends clients against allegations of kickbacks, overbilling, fraud, false statements, and extortion. Her civil litigation work includes complex business litigation, mass tort/product liability defense, and civil fraud actions.

After graduating law school, Sara served as a law clerk to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit then joined the firm in 2001.

Sara's unique experience with sentencing policies support our policy practice and the cities, communities, and advocate groups we serve. In 2006, Sara spent four years with the Federal Public & Community Defenders' National Sentencing Resource Project as a legal research-writing specialist. She drafted comments and testimony to the U.S. Sentencing
