Are you wondering:

- What, exactly, needs to be reported under the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and by when?
- How do the GDPR's data breach response and reporting requirements compare to similar U.S. laws?
- How will European authorities react to receiving the data breach notifications now required under the GDPR?
- How does longstanding experience with U.S. breach notification laws help us predict what is about to happen in Europe?

On Tuesday, 12 June, we hosted a webinar featuring key members of our Cybersecurity and Litigation teams who advise clients on these issues in Europe, the United States, and beyond. Drawing on their extensive experience in incident response planning, breach notifications, and regulatory enforcement and litigation actions, our team provided practical insights to help you benchmark and prepare to operate under a proliferating number of breach notification laws.

Topics covered during this webinar included:

- Compliance tips and benchmarks: What are other international companies doing to coordinate compliance and incident response?
- Litigation strategies for when an incident does occur.
- Bonus focus: Notification requirements under the EU's new Network and Information Systems (NIS) Directive, and other jurisdictions' evolving breach reporting laws.
