

Capital Markets and Tax

The capital markets can be a scary place. With huge numbers at play, taxes can be crucial. The rate of change of tax law and introduction of new challenges — such as FATCA, CRS, and anti-migration rules — make other regulatory changes look slow. The complexity can be bewildering. Knowledge of current market practice is often just as valuable as technical ability.

Our tax team can cut through these problems. We regularly work with leading international financial institutions to ensure their capital markets transactions run smoothly and without leaking tax.
