Biography

As the partner in charge of patent litigation in the Hogan Lovells Paris office, Stanislas Roux-Vaillard is mainly involved in national and multi-jurisdictional patent litigations, mediations and arbitrations, representing international clients, notably in the field of life sciences, telecommunications and chemistry. Stan brings insight to clients willing to take advantage of French patent law. Admitted to the Paris Bar, he represents clients by advocating in IP French courts, on first instance and on appeal.

With a network of talented patent litigators worldwide, Stan also takes part in the conception and execution of the multijurisdictional strategies of clients, along the specifics of their industry and business model. He is involved in a number of pharma and biotech cases helping clients make the most of their patent exclusivity. He represents clients in the telecom industry in contractual defences to standard essential patents and in non-essential patent claims brought by non-practicing entities.

In specific chemistry and mechanical engineering cases, his ability to use evidence gathering tools such as the saisie-contrefaçon helped clients gain leverage for early settlement of infringement situations. Stan is also involved in patent portfolio and know-how review and licensing, notably in corporate deals where IP valuation is key. He regularly writes articles on intellectual property developments in France. Stan is the author of
