

Alex Brightman

Senior Associate

London

Biography

Alex Brightman is an experienced construction lawyer with a particular focus on international energy and infrastructure projects.

He advises clients on all stages of the contracting process from procurement strategy, bid submission and negotiation through to contract close.

Prior to joining Hogan Lovells, Alex was a senior lawyer in the Doha office of an international law firm and supported public and private sector entities across the Gulf region on major transport (roads and rail), energy (construction of a new district cooling plant and hydro-electric power facilities), social housing and real estate development projects.

Representative experience

Advising ProjectCo on the development of a process plant and associated infrastructure for production of sugar, potable ethanol and power in Sri Lanka.

Advising on high value construction of a methanol plant and associated infrastructure in Russia, including preparation of EPC Contract.

Advising a developer in relation to the construction and financing of a solar PV project in Malawi, including negotiation of the EPC Contract and ancillary agreements.
