Biography

Borja Fernández has extensive experience in administrative, regulatory and public procurement law. He provides regulatory legal advice to leading companies in different sectors and defends their interests before public bodies. He participates in domestic and cross-borders transactions on assets subject to public procurement regimes.

Since joining the firm, Borja has advised clients in matters related to regulated sectors, public procurement, tourism, collaborative economy, environment, mining, transportation, urban planning, life sciences, consumption and energy, among others.

His strong problem-solving skills together with his academic background (PhD candidate in administrative penalties law and author of numerous publications in law journals and books) strengthen his ability to find innovative and well-founded solutions to complex legal issues.

Borja brings together his passion for the legal practice with a high level of commitment to clients, professionalism, initiative, positivism and reliability.
